

Steve Jobs, the late co-founder of Apple Inc., famously declared in a commencement address at Stanford University in 2005 that "you've got to find what you love." Jobs' words have become iconic and are often cited as a source of inspiration for those who seek to pursue their passions and purpose in life. I think following your heart is essential to living a full and meaningful life, and having very strong passion and hope will make us follow what we love even more.

One of the most famous quotes about the importance of following your passions comes from Ralph Waldo Emerson, an American philosopher and poet. Emerson once wrote, "Being yourself in a world that is constantly trying to make you something else is the greatest achievement." This quote captures the essence of what Jobs was saying in his speech - that in order to truly be happy and fulfilled in life, you must be true to yourself and pursue your own unique path, even if it goes against the expectations of others.

Another famous quote comes from Maya Angelou, an American author, poet, and civil rights activist. Angelou once said, "I learned that people will forget what you said, they will forget what you did, but they will never forget how you made them feel." This quote speaks to the idea that when you follow your passions and do what you love, you have the power to inspire others and make a positive impact on the world. By pursuing your own path, you can create something that resonates with others and leaves a lasting impression.

There are also many examples of successful people who have followed their passions and achieved great things as a result. Take J.K. Rowling, for instance - the author of the Harry Potter series. Rowling once said, "I was free because my worst fear had been fulfilled, and I had a daughter I adored, and I had an old typewriter and a great idea. So the nadir became a solid foundation on which to rebuild my life." This quote speaks to the idea that sometimes it takes hitting rock bottom and facing our greatest fears to find the courage to pursue our passions. Rowling's perseverance and dedication to her craft paid off in the end, as she became one of the most successful authors of all time.

Another example is Elon Musk, the founder of SpaceX and Tesla. Musk once said, "If you wake up in the morning and think that the future will be better, it will be a good day. Otherwise, it's not." This quote captures the essence of what Jobs was saying in his speech - that pursuing your passions and purpose in life is essential to achieving happiness and success. Musk's vision for a better future has inspired millions of people around the world and has led to numerous technological advancements that have improved our lives in countless ways.

In conclusion, I believe that Steve Jobs was right when he said that "you've got to find what you love." Following your passions and purpose in life is essential to achieving happiness, fulfillment, and success, and there are many famous quotes and examples that support this idea. By being true to yourself and pursuing your own unique path, you have the power to inspire others and make a positive impact on the world. So if you're feeling lost or unsure of what to do with your life, remember the words of Jobs, Emerson, Angelou, Rowling, and Musk - and go out there and find what you love.."